BOURBON BLACK BLITZENS.

LEARN TO SWIM.

Is Healthful Sport and May Be Means of Saving Many Lives.

One of the few child survivors of the St. Lawrence steamship disaster, a little girl, attributes her rescue to her ability to swim. "I learned how to swim at school," she said, "and when I found myself in the water I just struck out for a board I saw floating and pretty soon I was picked up by a lifeboat." Several of the survivors who have told their stories owe their lives to the fact that they were able to swim at least a few strokes and keep their heads above water until help arrived, and doubtless there were others whose rescue may be attributed to the same circumstance. There was never a time when such facilities for learning to swim, for both old and young, were offered as at present. Pittsburgh, in common with most cities, has provided many places for acquiring the art that are available to children and adults, with competent instructors in charge. There is no better way to keep in health during the summer than to patronize these pools, but the records of attendance for previous seasons indicate a lack of appreciation on the part of the public.

It is difficult to find a good excuse for failure to learn to swim by those who are well and strong. Modern inventive genius has even provided an apparatus by which timid folk may become proficient without enduring the ducking that used to be the invariable introduction to the country boy's first lesson. The importance of the accomplishment should be urged especially upon the girls. It is safe to say that the parents of the little survivor who has told the story of her rescue are giving thank that the school which she attended made swimming as important a part of the curriculum as French grammar or ancient history.

FOR AN IMPAIRED APPETITE.

To improve the appetite and to strengthen the digestion try a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. Mr. J. H. Seitz, of Detroit, Mich., says: "They restored my appetite when impaired, relieved me of a bloated feeling and caused a pleasant and satisfactory movement of the bowels."

For sale by all dealers. (June)

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS BUGGY PAINT

was originally made for re-painting and re-finishing old buggies, and combines all the toughness, durability, and strength of color necessary to withstand the hard wear a buggy gets. There's no other paint for the purpose as good and economical.

It's splendid wearing qualities make it also adaptable for painting porch and lawn furniture and all articles subject to outside exposure where a strong, gloss finish is wanted.
